Love is the first feeling that a living person feels. It is reminiscent of oxygen which cannot be seen but its existence is everywhere. It is a true feeling which is present in every moment of life; life is not possible without it. We enjoy it from childhood till our last breath. The name of love may be different but the essence is and there is the only one which is love. As an infant, a child enjoys the love of family, which is called caring; love for friends in school and college-age, called bonding; And the teacher is called, respect; love for one's partner called consummate; love for children, known as responsibility, love for demerging energy; The name is devotion, love for one's soul, self-worth, etc. Love is very innocent, pure, blissful and a true feeling that connects souls.

“ True love speaks in tender tones

And hear with gentle ear,

True love gives with open heart

And true love conquers fear.....”

Helen Steiner Rice

Love isn't about sexual pleasure or gender-specific, it's beyond boundaries. Love is present in every atom of nature. Love is a way to bind the whole universe; it is the first step of trust, care, bond, affection, devotion etc. Love is castle in the sky but it completes our life. It gives a purpose, a goal of life. Literature is a source for writers to portray the love of various creatures, creatures and humans for nature. Literature is a way of presenting the bonds of different relationships. Literature gives words to the feeling of love.

Whitman and Animals

Whitman finds his unity with the animal world. His love and closeness to his animal spirit form the basis of the poet. The poet's world is not one where man groans, cries, and makes meaningless utterances. His world is one where there are no rules, no customs and even no remorse. It is the beauty of the present moment that keeps the poet alive. In this poem the poet happily breaks his allegiance to mankind and finds solace in the animals. Tired of the company of man, the poet wants to change his path and wants to live with animals.

□ *They do not sweat and whine about their condition,
They do not lie awake in the dark and weep for their sins,
They do not make me sick discussing their duty to God"*

Wordsworth and his love towards nature

Wordsworth spiritualized nature and regarded her as a great moral teacher, as a supreme influence, as the best mother, guardian, and nurse of man. He believed that there is a spiritual connection between man and nature.

A deep religious sentiment permeates all his nature poetry. He means that a spiritual union is possible between the indwelling soul of the universe and the soul of man. His attitude towards nature is original and unique. Nature is a living and organic unity with its own life and personality. William Wordsworth is a famous and notable poet of nature.

Friendship-

Friendship is a relationship that gets stronger with time. Life is lonely sometimes without a devoted and dependable friend. Lucky are the people who have friends they can be trusted with and want to be with forever.

“You always perceive what I need,

And offer it before I plead.

Just like a book, my mind you read,

My true friend.

When tears fell from my eyes,

You were there to brush them away.”

Spiritual Love-

Love and spirituality are connected to each other. Spirituality is a tool for self-development, and love is an expression of that growth. Through love, we knowledge a close and cherished association with other people. Spirituality has a close relationship with us. Both love and spirituality are about developing a relationship. Spirituality teaches to love everyone from neighbors to family. And both spirituality and love teaching to be selfless.

Spirituality provides some imminent into love. These insights are important for understanding how love and spirituality are related to each other. Without love an important part of spirituality is always missing. And exclusive of spirituality it becomes tricky to appreciate the thought of love. The deepest connection between love and spirituality is with spiritual love. Spiritual love is constructed on many coatings. Romantic love can stem from a variety of things, a superficial attraction can lead to love as powerfully as a strong chemistry. But these are not indicators of a strong long-lasting relationship.

“We seek to get God's attention, with words that reach far.

But before we state our needs,

God knows just what they are.”

Spiritual love is built on the idea that two people have come together to help each other progress in their life path. The idea of walking on the path of spiritual progress is important in spirituality. It helps you achieve your life purpose, in harmony with your higher self, and lead a happy and contented life. When you enter into a spiritual loving relationship with someone, you help each other grow together. The relationship is centered around growing and developing with each other. It is a necessary part of developing a relationship that lasts a lifetime.

Self-Love

Self-love is a very necessary and beautiful concept. Nature teaches the concept of self-love every moment. Self-love is the only way to meet humanity. Self-love never means selfishness. Self-love means respecting yourself as a better person. Self-love means accommodating yourself completely, treating yourself with gentleness and respect, and nurturing your own growth and well-being. Self-love is not only important but accepting yourself for who you are is a beautiful thing. Never let your negativity overwhelm you and never let your negativity overwhelm you. Know that you are good enough.

"I sat srinking and did not notice the dusk,

Till falling petals filled the folds of my dress.

Drunken I rose and walked to the moonlit stream;

The birds were gone, and men also few."

Self-love gives us the courage to accept our imperfections and helps us transform our imperfections into perfection. Self-love is necessary to raise humanity. Self-love is a motivational emotion, it brings us to reality and gives us the strength to accept ourselves. It makes us learn to love the life we are living and turn life into the sweetest.

Various poem on self-love-

Pretty Ugly is the perfect poem for someone who needs a boost of confidence and self-love. Read from top to bottom, the poem is filled with doubts and feelings of inadequacy. The speaker says that they are ugly and no one should try to convince them. But, when read from the last line to the first line, the meaning of the poem changes completely. It becomes clear that it is only a matter of perspective and one can feel confident in oneself at all times.

MUSTN'TS LISTEN' is a classic Shel Silverstein poem. It is directed at young readers, but has a message that anyone can relate to. The speaker describes all the negatives that young people will face in their lives and encourages them to ignore the voices and do what they dream of doing.

Listen to the Never Haves, then listen close to me.

“Anything can happen, child, Anything can be.”

Anna Swir writes passionately about a speaker's post-breakup state of mind in I'll Open the Window. She uses vivid imagery to allow the reader to imagine the beauty of experiencing things alone and independently. She speaks confidently throughout the poem, expressing her determination that things are going to be even better in the future than they are now. She has a deep desire for independence and describes herself as ridding herself of the emotional complications from her failed relationship. She reaffirms the need for solitude at the end of the poem and is ready to rediscover herself. Here are the first four lines of the second to last verse:

Mother' s love –

Mother's love is sweet, innocent, loving, caring, and sometimes full of worries. Mother's love signifies the power that helps a child to overcome all difficulties or difficult situations. She plays various roles in my life like a friend, a partner, a mentor, and a teacher. Mother's love is chaste and celestial. Mother's love is something that never dies even it increases day by day. The relationship between mother and child is full of emotions. There is no expectation or demand for this. She gives birth to us through endless suffering and nurtures us with care and love throughout life.

Various poet and their ideology about mother-

The 19th-century poet John Greenleaf Whittier, a Quaker also known for his abolitionism, shows how his mother disciplined him when he was a child.

Joan Bailey Baxter remembers her late mother, who left behind a resilient family. May this tribute bring comfort to those mourning the loss of a loved one.

“For she had fulfilled his prophesy

Spreading love, honor, and hope

She instilled in those she left behind

The ability to understand and cope.”

Rudyard Kipling's sentimental poem honors the unconditional love given by a mother to a child, even if the child has committed a crime. Elsewhere in the poem, he describes how a mother's love can touch a child even in hell.

Walt Whitman describes motherhood very traditionally. Whitman told about the care of her mother, which is his childhood.

In the nineteenth century, both male and female poets wrote passionately about motherhood. Men wrote from the eldest son's point of view, and women generally wrote from the daughter's point of view. However, sometimes he wrote from the point of view of the mother. Here, Lucy Maud Montgomery, best known for her "Anne of Green Gables" book series, writes about a mother who wonders what the future holds for her infant son.

Love is the most beautiful part of life. It is from the love that humanity exists, bondage arises. Love is not a special state, it is a real feeling, which is present in every living being. Presence of love in every stage of life and in every creature of the world. Love is beyond limits, it is like the wind. Love builds relationships and drives us to create a world of peace. The child's love for the mother, the mother's care for her children, teaches us to bond unconditionally. Love opposes betrayal, inhuman actions.

The journey of love may be difficult and difficult but the purpose of love is only to spread peace and to care for others. Love connects your heart with the heart of others and you feel something special for that.

“ When the power of love overcomes the love of power, the world will know the peace”

Love fills life with colors of trust, care, passion, dedication, respect, responsibility, loyalty etc. Love is like a moon among the billions of stars, it fill with light of joys.

*“ Love is in the soul,
Love is in the life,
Love is in the family,
Love is in nature,
Love is everywhere,
Just feel it
Without any biases ness
Without any judgment
Without any boundaries.*

Just love

To yourself,

To care ones,

To family,

To nature
